Auditor's Office Website Now Available in Multiple Languages

COLUMBUS, Ohio – In an effort to better serve the diverse communities of Franklin County, the Auditor's office website is now available in multiple languages, Franklin County Auditor Michael Stinziano announced Monday.

The new feature, which uses Google Translate, allows a user to select from more than 100 language options at the top of the web page. It went live earlier this month.

"This new feature will increase accessibility to the many important services of the Auditor's office and brings our office into the 21st century with new technologies to serve the people of Franklin County," Stinziano said.

Options include Spanish, Somali, and Nepali, which are all used by Columbus' significant immigrant community. The new feature is part of Stinziano's goal of modernizing the Auditor's office and building an office that is transparent, accessible and accountable to Franklin County residents.
